ENG 419 TOPICS IN MEDIEVAL LITERATURE: Arthurian Romance                      This graduate course examines the main stories of King Arthur and the accompanying legends of his reign in the Middle Ages, mostly in English. We also consider the genre of medieval romance, its attributes and limitations, and its historical position in western discourse, from its precursor, the epic, to its successor, the novel. Medieval romances constitute a formidable collection of texts. Our broad categories of study include Arthur himself, his rise, reign, and demise, and the phenomenon of his story's popularity in medieval discourse. We then turn to the legends surrounding the infamous and star-crossed lovers: Lancelot and Guinevere, and Tristan and Isolde. Romance's supernatural qualities are then traced in the tales of the magician Merlin. The English favorite, Gawain, will be studied, followed by the Grail knights whose stories integrate romance and mysticism. The downfall of the idealized Arthur will be seen in its political and cultural context. In addition, throughout the quarter we will be reading and carefully analyzing the 13th-century French romance, Silence, a text that opens up larger considerations of gender, humor, and language in the genre.  MAE: Medieval Requirement; Elective  MAWP: LLPT Elective; Open Elective	T 6:00-9:15 PM	Lesley Kordecki
ENG 429 TOPICS IN RENAISSANCE LITERATURE: John Donne &amp; the Metaphysical Poets                      This course will study the poetry of John Donne in the context of work by his close friends and imitators, a group whose knotty poetic imagery and twisted sense of style were so distinctive that one eighteenth-century critic identified them as "a race of writers that may be termed the metaphysical poets." Besides Donne, likely authors will include George Herbert, Henry Vaughan, Richard Crashaw, and Andrew Marvell. We'll pair close readings of the texts with broader considerations of the period's fascinating poetic world: literary authorship and coterie textuality, devotional and erotic verse, the shifting status of printed books, royalist political culture, and a new ecological attention to nature.  MAE: Renaissance Requirement; Elective  MAWP: LLPT Elective; Open Elective	M 6:00-9:15 PM	Megan Heffernan

ENG 484 WRITING WORKSHOP TOPICS: Narrative Structure in Contemporary Novel This is a course designed to mimic the way many working writers actually work. We will read contemporary novels—novels published in the last ten years—and we will seek to learn through emulation. Though a conversation of meaning is inevitable in literature, we will read as much for the "How" these books are put together as the "what" they say. Then you will try your hand at stealing some of these techniques in your own fiction. MAWP: Writing Workshop Requirement; Open Elective MAE: Elective	W 6:00-9:15 PM	Dan Stolar
ENG 484 WRITING WORKSHOP TOPICS: Memoir In this course we read, write, workshop, and discuss the literary memoir—first-person nonfiction narratives that use evocative description, engaging reflection, and all kinds of prose structures to illuminate memory, personal history, and other accounts of—and reflections on—your life and lived experience. The purpose of this course is to expand your nonfiction storytelling and personal reflection writing skills and deepen your understanding of contemporary literary memoirs, whatever their subject. MAWP: Writing Workshop Requirement; Open Elective MAE: Elective	TH 6:00-9:15 PM	Barrie Borich

ENG 509 INTERNSHIP	Online	Chris Green

Online  By permission only. Registration is by permission of C. Green cgreen1@depaul.edu  “Internship in English” is a four-credit course designed to complement your English course of study along with your internship experience (100 hours of internship work). Using literature, film, and career guides, the class explores both academic and pragmatic aspects of work. We will analyze definitions of and strategies for career success, what makes work meaningful, the positive and negative power of technology in the workplace, and issues of ethics and social justice for employers and employees. Most practically, we will explore current career opportunities for English graduates and reflect on your ideal career paths, and ask you to create job-finding strategies. Ultimately, we will relate our readings and discussions to your internship and apply what we learn to your future career. There is no pre-requisite or prior knowledge needed to take this course.
